The elevator has a lifting capacity of 4,600 pounds, it was put up by 3. F. Boggs of Kamsas City and made by the Otts Elevator company of Chicago. There will be another like it put in the killing house and a smaller one in the smoke

When the machinery was all completed yesterday and Mr. Boggs asked a reporter for the Engle to get in and see how the new elevator moved he was surprised at the case and swiftness with which it glided from top to basement of the great building, up and down without a jar. It is provided with six safety stops to prevent accidents. A child might operate the elevator with perfect safety as it is provided with automatic stops, so that it never strikes the ceiling in the top story nor the floor in the basement. "He said nothing to me, but walking up there," said Mr. Kirk, pointing to the end of the desk just above which was tacked a placard presenting a small picture of Paderewski. "He stopped there and for ten-minutes he stood gazing intentity at the picture of the planist without moving a muscle, except violently working his jaws as a cow chews her end. He then turned to me and said: Say, I wonder if the ladies would mind if I played the plano.' I, thinking him probably a genius in disguise, said: 'Why, no, go ahead.'

"There he was at the plano pounding away for dear life and studing at the top of his voice. He flung his hands wildly above the keyboard and would fly from one end of the instrument to the other with lightning rapidity, seemingly striking all the keys at ones. I judged he was trying to copy Paderewski's style as he thought it. You know how some players throw their hands into the air? Well, he did this, but not very gracefully. He got up from the pinno in two or three minutes. One of the eight women in the parlor jokingly asked him if the plano was not out of tune pretty hadly. He walked over to the window, spit, walted a minute and then said very dignified: "Somewhat."

"He then gave us another verse of his unearthly pounding and I noticed that when he commenced he would strike a chord which was very pretty. I was called downstairs and had hardly reached the bottom of the staircase when here came Hager after me, ile passed me

STEREOPTICON WAS MISSING

People Who Heard Dr. Cole Last Night Were Disappointed. Dr. Cole lectured to a very small and ience at the Friends university last night. And those who did attend were sadly disappointed as he had advertised to illustrate his lesture with stereopticon views but the stereopticon did not show up. Mr. Cole is an interesting speaker and his description of the Yosemite valley was of a high standard of excellence, but the evening would have been enjoyed a great. deal more if he had used the stereopticon and some of his fine views of the valley. The redeeming feature of the entertain-ment was the exhibition of the picture of the valley. This was an excellent piece of artistic workmanship.
